¹ Originally, Salabwek School had functioned as a “feeder school,” a community school that absorbed extra students from neighbouring communities. The first estimated number of classrooms needed to accommodate students had been projected at 25. However, neighbouring communities have since established their own schools and as a result, Salabwek’s need has been reassessed to 20.

² One classroom and one library are currently under construction in Salabwek.

³ Hand washing stations are built in tandem with latrines at schools. Free The Children is continuing to work with community members and school officials to ensure that these stations are well maintained, with soap and water available at all times.

⁴ There are 8 structures with 16 access points in total.

⁶ This number fluctuates based on the number of community members utilizing rain catchment systems versus the water well.

⁷ WASH lessons focus on educating students about proper water, sanitation and hygiene practices.

Conclusion

Since work began in Salabwek back in 2007, the community has seen a substantial amount of development and growth. With the support of SVQF, the community has worked alongside Free The Children finding sustainable solutions that continue to strengthen their community. Salabwek continues to reflect a model community, within the Narok South District, exhibiting a successful education system, strong clean water infrastructure, fruitful income generating enterprises and community pride, among many other accomplishments. Breaking the cycle of poverty, Salabwek illustrates the ways in which a community can realize its fullest potential.
